Researchers in Nepal confirm first rhino TB case with VIEW's help

Researchers in Nepal's Chitwan National Park have found the first confirmed case of tuberculosis (TB) in a young female Asian One-horned rhino. VIEW's Nepal program made this discovery possible!

You can find the Fox News Science article with my reaction here:

<http://www.foxnews.com/science/2016/03/30/researchers-in-nepal-confirm-first-case-tb-in-rhino.html>.

TB is a deadly and highly infectious disease and this finding confirms VIEW's position that investigating disease is critical to implementing comprehensive conservation solutions for vulnerable endangered wildlife populations.

For further detail, please the scientific paper at

Your support helps make this work possible! You can play a role in helping the VIEW team take the next steps in researching the scope of the disease risk to the Asian one-horned rhino population and other wildlife. Please consider another gift today!

Thank you!
